

FLETCHER HITS
NEW DEAL RULE
AS SUBVERSIVE

G. O. P. Chief Calls On The Voters of Every Party To Join Battle

TO SAVE CONSTITUTION

Says Issue Will Go Beyond All Party Lines In The United States

WASHINGTON, July 30—In terms indicating that he expects the Constitution to be the basic issue of the 1936 Presidential campaign, Henry P.
Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, declared last night that the Republican Party is prepared to meet the attempts of the New Deal "to pervert and subvert the Constitution."

The Republican Party, Mr. Fletcher said, "welcomes the aid and support of every patriotic man and woman in this struggle to preserve our form of Government and our free institutions."

In his address Mr. Fletcher said the next election will be "one of the most important in American history."

"The fundamental issues are becoming clear," he said. "They will transcend mere party lines."

"The Republican Party," he said, believes with Abraham Lincoln that the people of these United States are the rightful masters of both Congress and courts—not to overthrow the Constitution, but to overthrow the men who pervert the Constitution."

Mr. Fletcher said the President's press conference on May 31, at which he discussed the Supreme Court decision on the NRA, and political developments since then, "indicate the political trend."

"Many of the New Deal laws and pending bills, which the President has ordered Congress to pass, whether they like it or not, will have to undergo the final test of constitutionality," he said. "The nearly uniform decisions in the lower courts forecast the ultimate result. Most of this legislation will not square with the fundamental law of our Government."

"The Roosevelt Administration realizes this. So what? The Constitutional barriers to 'planned economy' are to be removed. Why? Because they stand in the way of a centralized, socialistic state, governed without restraint or limit, by a President and a subservient Congress."

"We need not doubt for one moment that if the safeguards of the Constitution are removed, all subsequent Congresses will be subservient to the executive. They cannot help but be. No Congress, however able, independent and self-respecting, could legislate for the daily needs and control the lives of our widespread citizenry. It would have to set up commissions and bureaus for that purpose and delegate its power and authority to them."

"The Supreme Court has said this cannot now be done. Should the New Dealers succeed in fomenting sufficient dissatisfaction and opposition to the Constitution to bring about its change, the barriers can be pushed aside and the things which the Administration has tried unsuccessfully and indirectly to do, might then be accomplished."

"It has been wise-cracked that you cannot eat the Constitution. You can't, and you can't eat the Bible, or the Golden Rule, or the Ten Commandments, or the deed to your property, or your life insurance policy, or the laborer's contract with his employer, whether made individually or by collective bargaining."

"Plausible arguments will be offered to us. We will be told that that clause of the Constitution giving Congress the power to regulate commerce amongst the several States has been too narrowly interpreted by the courts; that in this day and generation Congress must have power over all subjects of national interest and concern, if social justice and the so-called 'more abundant life' are to be attained in the United States."

PROSPEROUS ENGLAND LAUGHS AT US

(New York American, Sunday, July 28)

England—sober, poised and sane—is not deceived by what is going on in the United States.

She sees with level gaze the absurdity of our economics, the tragedy of our wasteful and corrupting expenditure, and the folly of what we call our New Deal "policies."

She KNOWS that the weight of taxes which the insane spenders in Washington have been piling up on us, causing us to lean further and further toward collapse, must inevitably crush us.

"Rooseie's $4,000,000,000 prosperity push" has no appeal to the hard-headed English.

THEY know it is NO "prosperity push," and they know just what the stupendous squandering means.

England avoids follies with as sure an instinct as we plunge into them.

It has just packed off Lloyd George's suggestion of a legislative program because it smacks too much of the New Deal.

This leader of a party which has died on his hands is trying to stage a comeback. He thinks he can rally the masses by promises of public money—even as Roosevelt and Farley do.

But the British Government is composed of men of very different calibre from the Frankfurters, Wallaces, Corrigan, Cohens, and God knows who else, of the discredited Brain Trust.

Its Cabinet is made up of statesmen, not pretenders and make-believes.

England wants nothing of the New Deal, and will have nothing remotely resembling it!

In an official statement the Lloyd George proposals are characterized as merely "hopeful prophesies involving far-reaching changes in the economic, social and political system, by establishing some spectacular new machinery of government, which is expected to evolve a whole new program of national regeneration in a twelve-month."

If the United States is determined to take leave of its senses, England will not imitate her.

She proposes to stick to private enterprise, to avail herself of the powerful initiative of her sturdy people, to stimulate and assist, but never to arrest and stifle by governmental interference the growth and expansion which is natural to her people.

"THE FAILURE OF MANY EXPERIMENTS INITI-ATED BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS SINCE 1931 IS LARGELY DUE TO DISREGARD OF THESE PRINCI-PLES," the Cabinet statement truly says.

Thus it links the United States with prostrate Russia, tottering Germany and Fascist Italy.

And with simplicity and truth, the world's innovators and half-baked reformers are reminded that "NO GREAT CONTRY CAN CLAIM TO HAVE ADVANCED SO FAR AS ENGLAND UPON THE PATH TOWARD RENEWED PROSPERITY."

Let the New Deal—the raw deal—the crooked deal—compare the plight to which it has reduced us with the enviable fortune of our sister country!

Issue Final Warning To Owners of Unlicensed Dogs

Final warning is issued to dog own-

Claude F. Fisher, dog law investi-sylvania, Department of Agriculture, states that the last warning to dog owners is being given, and if the laws regarding licenses of such animals are not complied with, the owners will be subject to immediate prosecution, and subsequent fines and costs.

INCORRECT FIGURE

An incorrect figure appeared in the total votes credited yesterday to Miss Helen Booz, Emilie, in the Yellowstone Park contest. Miss Booz was credited on Saturday with 79,800, and gaining 5,100 votes before the close of the contest her total yesterday should have read 84,900, instead of 54,900 shown through a typographical error. A check-up of the judges' list shows Miss Booz's final tabulation to be 84,900.

POTATO BLIGHT IS DUE TO WET WEATHER

Farmers Having Difficult Time With Weeds In The Fields

OATS STALKS LODGED

DOYLESTOWN, July 30—Continued hot and wet weather, according to County Agent William F. Greenawalt, has been responsible largely for the appearance of the so-called late blight on the potato vines. Fields which have been sprayed thoroughly with Bordeaux are not seriously affected. Mr.
Greenawalt has stated that potato growers still have an opportunity to curb the blight by spraying with Bordeaux.

Very few of the early potatoes have been taken from the ground and as a result it is impossible to make predictions concerning the outcome of the crop. Mr. Greenawalt said he has found throughout the county that the potatoes seem to be well set.

Farmers have been unable to get on their fields because of the wet weather, and consequently the weeds have been taking advantage of the absence of the cultivators and weedeers. Many corn fields are badly infested with grass and weeds.

Harvesting of the wheat and oats crops has also been retarded because of the wet weather and some of the wheat which was harvested and threshed immediately was not thoroughly dried. There is a tendency for it to heat in the bins. Farmers throughout the county report a good wheat yield. In some places the crop produced 40 bushels to the acre.

Most of the wheat has been harvested and farmers are now in the midst of gathering the oats crop. This, in some places, has become very difficult because, during the heavy rains, the stalks lodged closely to the ground.
Where this has taken place farmers will be unable to use the binder in cutting it, but will have to resort to the use of the mowing machine. Some of the oats has been discolored by the rain.

Although the rain has generally helped up the farmers with their work, it has on the other hand been beneficial to the pastures, alfalfa, clover and soy beans.

Tomato growers, a majority of them located in the lower part of the county, are preparing to gather their crop which promises to be excellent this season.

The rain and hot weather, according to Mr. Greenawalt, have not in the least curbed the activities of the Mexican bean beetles and Japanese beetles. On the other hand, the warmer the weather, the more active the Japanese beetles.

11 in Race for Two Seats

HARRISBURG, July 30—Faced with overcrowded fields of candidates, Republican and Democratic party strategists today started a week long drive to thin the ranks of aspirants for the State Supreme Court in the interests of party harmony at the primaries. As the deadline passed for filing judicial nominating petitions, seven Republicans and four Democrats were lined in the race for one or two Supreme Court seats. Candidates have until next Monday to withdraw from the race. Attorney General Charles J.
Margiotti was expected to make public today his findings on whether the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Alexander Simpson, Jr., will be filled at the November election. One vacancy is certain with the expiration of Chief Justice Robert F.
Frazer's term. As a result, both parties desire to eliminate contestants to concentrate their drive on a single candidate against Judge M. A. Mus-manno, active independent Allegheny county jurist.

To Attempt Rescue

By John Goette

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

Peking, China, July 30—Chinese and Japanese troops were preparing today to invade the rain-soaked Pao Chang hills in Chahar Province where Garrett Jones, noted correspondent of the Manchester, England, Guardian, is in the hands of Chinese bandits. Herbert Mueller of the official German newspaper, his companion, has been released after being held two days a prisoner, and is expected to arrive in Kalgartomorrow. The British Embassy has filed a vigorous protest with Chinese authorities at Peking and Nanking, demanding quick action to rescue Jones. Reports that this correspondent had also been kidnapped, possibly growing out of the fact that I recently made a tour of the area where my two colleagues were seized, are obviously erroneous. Jones and Mueller were enroute to Chahar in a bus driven by a Russian, according to reports received here today. The bandits, in military uniform, fired until the bus was halted, then bound the Europeans and carried them off into the Pao Chang Hills. The Russian driver was released under orders to deliver a ransom note to authorities.

MOTHER JUST CRIED

Parent Wept for Joy While Miss Muffett Laughed
Hysterically

"I was so happy and excited when I heard I had won the Yellowstone Park contest, that I guess I became hysterical. I started to laugh and couldn't stop."

This was the reaction of Miss Janice M. Muffett, 575 Swain street, when she first learned she had been chosen as "Miss Bristol" by means of votes of hundreds of relatives and friends, and is thus to be awarded the free 10-day trip to Yellowstone National Park, which will start next Tuesday, August 6th. The contest was sponsored by 15 merchants of this area in conjunction with the Bristol Courier.

And the reaction of the other members of the Muffett family is not difficult to guess either. "We had all been so anxious to learn the result," continued Miss Muffett, "and as the end drew near and our hopes had been raised so, my mother said she felt that she would cry if I didn't win.
But when she heard I won she cried anyhow." "How about your brothers and sisters?" Miss Muffett was asked in an interview. "They're just tickled to death." The whole family has been interested, and yesterday morning a number of the children of the neighborhood kept coming to the house to ask if the winner was known yet."

There are six children in the Muf-fett family, the contest winner being the oldest. Janice has three sisters and two brothers, who spurred her on to victory by their eager "rooting." And now each of the other five Muffets wishes that he or she could "go with Janice."

The fair winner of the contest which lasted for six weeks, was born in Bristol, her birthplace being on Cedar street. "I've attended most of the public schools in Bristol," said the fortunate young woman today. Her studies were followed at Bath, Wood, Washington street schools, and at the high school building in the sixth ward.
Miss Muffett, who is in her 19th year, is a graduate of Bristol high school, having completed her studies in the commercial department in June of this year. She hopes to be enabled to attend Trenton School of Industrial Arts in the Fall. "But I'm not thinking of school just now," she added.

Since commencement time most of Miss Muffett's interests have been centered on the contest. Having no position, she aided her mother, and cared for the ballots which relatives and friends turned over to her. "Some days it kept me busy signing the ballots which were given to me personally, and I surely am grateful to all who helped me to win. I'm so happy over the whole thing that I hardly know what to say. I do want to express sincere thanks to the Bristol Courier and the merchants who made the trip possible. And I also wish to thank my friends in Bristol and vicinity for the wonderful support and cooperation I have received from them.
I certainly wish the other contestants could accompany me on this trip."

The good tidings were first brought to the winner by her uncle. "He was waiting for one of the first copies of The Courier that came off the press, and he brought it right back to me," stated the third ward resident. The bearer of the good news preceded the official messenger of The Courier by several minutes, and with the news spreading like wild-fire countless personal and telephone calls of congratulations were received by Miss Muffett in the meantime. Yesterday afternoon proved a full one, with the Muffett family being kept busy answering the door bell and telephone. But it was a happy task, and every visitor was welcome. "What was your total?"
"Was your majority large?" "Oh, I'm so glad you won" were only a few of the excited greetings to the fortunate one.

When asked if she had ever been far from home the young woman replied in the negative. "I was never any distance from home until last Spring, when our high school class went to Washington for four days," and in answer to other queries the Swain street resident said she has never slept on a train, and has never seen

USURPATION OF POWER

To play the game is easy if you can make and change the rules to suit yourself. Applied to sports the thing is an absurdity. Yet, in effect, it is what has been done at Washington through acts of usurpation taken to federalize control, ignoring the constitutional concept on which this nation exists as a government of divided, as well as of co-ordinate, powers.

To a greater extent even than in the NRA, the disruptive elements are present in the AAA, brought into sharper relief by the Boston decision that the law is unconstitutional. The purpose was to establish a price parity between farm products and tariff-protected commodities by a system of imbursements for crop curtailments. The genesis of the AAA was the campaign pledge of Mr. Roosevelt for a sound agriculture program that would finance itself. To enable him to redeem that pledge congress not only permitted use of the taxing power, which is confined to revenue, for a purpose outside the federal jurisdiction, but also provided that the rate of the tax be fixed by the secretary of agriculture. The supposedly restrictive provisions are such in name only. In addition congress delegated to the executive branch the power to make orders having all the effect of law without prescribing definite standards of action.

Even had the result fulfilled the promise, which it has not, it would not have vindicated the method. True, the farmer has been benefited temporarily, but in the process he has suffered serious losses in the foreign market, which he may never regain. Other countries have been encouraged to grow more wheat and cotton thereby gaining new outlets and improving the sum of their knowledge in the technique of such production. Thus they have become more formidable competitors than ever. In the domestic field the AAA has, by the operation of prices, put a check on consumption, creating a condition verging on a consumers' strike. Such effects are diffused upon all.

Certainly it is no tribute to the brains of the administration that the best scheme they could devise involved the destruction of great quantities of foodstuffs along with drastic restriction on production, running counter not only to the constitution, but to tried economic principles as well. That, too, when the crux of the problem was not one of production so much as of distribution, for which no solution has been offered.

Such is a sample of the fruits of a political philosophy that, contrary to the fundamentals of constitutional government, disregards the wisdom and necessity of proper checks and balances in the maintenance of political and economic freedom. It matters not how well intentioned the purpose. Neither time nor change has affected the counsel of Washington, who, warning against such usurpation, declared that though taken "in one instance as an instrument of good, the precedent must always overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit."

If science is so smart, maybe it can tell what becomes of the money you save by giving up this or that.

All we need is a way to expand credit when nobody wishes to borrow except those whose credit isn't any good.

When asked what she is most anxious to see in Yellowstone the winner replied "Everything! I don't think there is any one particular thing. It will all be so new and interesting," she added, as she also made reference to the fact that a sight-seeing trip of Chicago, is provided for in the itinerary.

The contest winner who polled a total of 900,000 votes during the six weeks period, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. Muffett. She is of slight build, being five feet, three inches in height, and weighing 100 pounds. She has wavy hair of a light brown hue, and her eyes are gray. THE SNOW LEOPARD by Chris Hawthorne

CHAPTER XVII

"When Miss Sire comes back," resumed the detective, "she'll dress for dinner. That'll be in the Rose Room at seven o'clock, according to what she told the maid while she was standing outside Jeff Whipple's door."

"Was the transom open?" Bannister demanded.

Toole nodded. "Miss Sire probably was talking at him but he didn't know it. Just as she was getting into the elevator the big lobster stuck his head out of the door to get an eyeful. He'll be in the Rose Room himself at seven."

"Then what?"

"I'll go into his room and take the stuff he stole from Sire. In the meantime, you'd better go down and meet the girl in the park. Tell her, if you like, that I learned that she had come back to New York in her own plane; that I followed her here from the New York Yacht Club."

"Toole, you're a wizard!" Bannister exclaimed. How did you find out that she was coming back?"

"If the plane came back one of the stewards was to phone me. Well, it did. I don't look so much like a wizard now, do I? Jeff probably phoned Sire from here; that's likely the way his daughter found out that he was in this hotel."

"What plan do you think Miss Sire has in mind?" asked Bannister, eager to learn as much as possible before he joined her in the park.

"She doesn't intend to be in the Rose Room at seven, but she expects Jeff Whipple to be there." The detective laughed silently.

When Bannister had gone Toole went to the window and looked down, finally picking up the lady with the red chow. A policeman was talking to her and gesticulating.

"Giving her the gate on account of the dog," Toole conjectured. "Ah, there's Bannister now!"

For a few minutes more the detective remained motionless and silent, then a prolonged whistle escaped him.

"She's thrown him down—won't talk to him!"

Another long pause. "They're both heading back for the hotel but taking different paths. She's bound to play a lone hand in this game. Huh! and she told me that she'd work with the One-Armed Syndicate!"

In Bannister's flurry over the discovery that Karen was occupying a room next to Jeff Whipple's he had neglected to ask Toole what further he had learned of the murdered prince—Jura Bai. It was just as well. For once the dark warrens of the underworld had failed the detective, even the stool pigeons who specialized in international cases were at sea. But he did learn that Matt Boyle was making a "hush" job of it, that the State Department at Washington was investigating through its agents in New York, and that Maurice Sire had withdrawn into the shadows.

Toole removed his coat and derby, replacing them with the porter's jacket and cap. Picking up Bannister's bag, he shambled into the corridor, augmenting his disguise by a stooping posture and a general vacuity of expression that sat easily upon his heavy features.

Bannister was first to emerge from an elevator; he brushed past his co-worker without a sign of recognition and entered the room, leaving a sulphurous trail of mutterings in his wake. He came out again almost immediately, probably having observed the presence of Toole's derby and coat and the absence of the porter's cap and blouse. The detective, bent slightly, was shuffling toward the elevator shafts.

Diek was about to hail him when a car stopped and Karen Sire (with-out the chow, this time) stepped out and walked rapidly toward her apartment. Bannister flattened himself within the embrasure of his own door until he heard a bang down the corridor. Peering out, he saw no sign of Toole.

"Wonder if he's gone in with her?" he muttered. His own experience with Karen Sire in the park had paralyzed him. First she had seemed surprised, then irritated, and finally had become haughty. Her attitude and manner, more than anything she said (she had scarcely spoken a dozen words to him), were capable of only one construction—she regarded him as an annoying intruder.

Why had she treated him in this cavalier fashion? Was the onus on him or did it lodge within herself? After all, there had been a saving grace mixed with her apparent hostility; a certain wishfulness, a seeming desire not to give him pain, contributed some emollient to his lacerated sensibilities.

Poor Bannister! How was he to guess the quirk that guided Karen Sire? With a hundred distracted conjectures radiating from his brain, he had never once, even remotely, thrust out in the right direction. What relief the absurd truth now net. And, in this threshing about, heaven only knew what might happen to the girl.

Yes, Jeff Whipple was his meat! Bannister stood up, his new accentment giving him a sense of restored self respect. "Bully," he remarked, "the last time I used these boots as instruments of justice was on a mule packer down in Peru—remember that, don't you?"

Bully, of course, wagged assent. Whatever the expedition, he was for it. But Bannister waved the airedale back and started toward the door.

Before he touched the knob, Toole thrust it open from the outside and stepped into the room with his fin-would have given him—what a laugh! How glad he would have been to tell her of his own descent from Pochontas!

But on all this, darkness still enveloped him. His brother Hod, he reflected, would have told him, with a cruelty begotten of kindness, that he was simply making an ass of himself; that Karen Sire had shown a momentary interest in him simply because he had been thrown picturesquely in her way; that her true and permanent interest lay with people of her own sphere. Again the shadow of the murdered Prince obtruded itself; the newspapers had said that he was a man of fabulous wealth.

With a savage kick, Bannister hurled back the lid of his trunk. He gazed down at the assortment of rough but useful things that made up his own kit. He was in a mood for violence. A pair of heavy leaced boots, with soles fully a half inch thick, caught his eye. They fascinated him; more than once those boots (the right one, particularly) had served him in the sudden execution of a sentence imposed by himself. They had been his law in camp.

Bannister pulled off his shoes and drew on the boots. Bully came nearer to him, wagging his tail but manifesting a truculence that was full of meaning to his master.

"I'm going to do it, Bully," said Diek grimly, "but you're out of this particular little exploit. Anyway, you never did like skunks or rattlesnakes. It's a skunk that I'm after now."

He faced the boots deliberately, an occasional chuckle escaping him. A thought had come that filled him with unholy glee. Karen Sire had refused to permit his intervention between herself and Big Jeff Whipple; the headstrong girl was determined to pit her feminine arts against a man who would break their silken filaments as a shark does through the meshes of a min-ger to his lips. "Jeff is stirrin' around next door," he cautioned.

It was not until Bannister's heavy heels crunched the floor at the edge of the carpet that Toole looked down. "Why the boots?" he demanded.

Bannister felt like a schoolboy trapped in some wild prank. Yet he faced the ordeal honestly. "I've been figuring this thing out, Toole," he said, "and the only way I can see to handle this situation adequately is kick Whipple down the corridor to the elevator. That kind of a rebuke would have a beautiful finality about it. And it wouldn't prevent Sire from going ahead in his own way. Why waste finesse on a critter like Jeff?"

Toole knew, as every man knows, that baffled love often finds an outlet in curious channels of assinninity. He met the situation in that spirit. "Take off them boots, you big lobster!" he ordered, purposely dropping into the coarsest form of speech that he could bring to his tongue. "Where do you think you are, anyway? This is one of the most aristocratic dumps in New York. If you tried any rough stuff here, a radio fleet would be on top of us in no time."

Bannister wavered, swinging his right foot like a pendulum.

"I just left Miss Sire," the detective went on, "and she dropped a few words that ought to give you comfort. You're not in Dutch with her; she has something on her mind—a secret she can't bear to let us know. It seems that this guy who was killed was a maverick prince of a country in Asia that was scuttled by a cousin of his great grandfather—or something like that. She doesn't know the hook-up between this bird and the leopard robe, or just where the Whipple Syndicate horns in. She wants to learn about that first—see?"

ST. ANN'S SCORES SECOND CONSECUTIVE VICTORY

St. Ann's A. A. scored its second consecutive win in as many games last night, defeating the Cubans, 5-4, in a Twilight League contest. Three runs in the first gave the Saints the edge but the colored boys tied it in the fifth only to have the Wood Streeters win out in the sixth.

Ray Pieo led the way to the scoring of the winning run when he doubled to begin the sixth. He advanced to third on an error by Thompson and crossed the platter with the necessary counter on a wild pitch by Bragg.

"Mike" DeRisi got himself in hot water in the Cubans' seventh when Gibson opened with a single and stole second. DeRisi lost the plate to Spencer and passed him. But Thompson, E. Spencer and Long could not advance the runners, being easy outs.

"Jim" Spencer with a triple and single led the losers with the stick, while Pieo with a double and single led the St. Ann's wood-toters.

NEWPORT ROAD NINE

GAINS EASY VICTORY

Fifteen hits from the bats of the Newport Road Men's Club gave them an easy 12-2 victory over the Hibernians last night in a Twilight League game on the Newport Road Men's Club field. The safe bingles were made off the hurling of Dave Ennis and Joe Antonelli.

The Newporters hit the ball freely and were led at the plate by Harry Mellor and Johnny Swope who had three hits each. Both of these boys had a double and two singles. East-lack and Cameron were the only Newport players who did not connect for safeties. The Road Club amassed a 10-0 lead in the first four frames.

Four consecutive hits by Brescia, Thompson, Antonelli and Clay gave the Hibs their two runs in the fifth. It was the first defeat of the second half for the Hibs and brought an end to Newport's losing streak of three straight games.

ROCKHILL'S TRIPLE
WINS FOR SEEDMEN

A triple by "Vic" Rockhill and a short passed ball enabled the Landreth Seed-Packers to annex another victory Sunday afternoon as the Ocean View A. C. bowed to the Bristolians, 5-4, in a ten-inning fracas. The game was played on the Ocean View diamond.

Rockhill was the first hitter in the sixth and led off with a tremendous drive to left. He stopped at third base. In a short passed ball, Rockhill made a sprint for the plate. Catcher Conello chased the ball and threw to it. Both Rockhill and Townsend were spilled at the plate but the Umpire called the runner safe.

Sid Parcell led the seedmen with a triple, double, and single. Sullivan was very effective in the exciting ball game.

Next Sunday the Seed-Packers will play the Riverton A. C. in a return match on Leedom's field.

JEFFERSON A. C. UPSETS

DOPE AND WINS, 6-3

Piling up a 6-0 lead in the first three frames, the Jefferson A. C. upset the dope in the Bristol Twilight League last night, beating Tullytown A. A., 6-3, and handing that club its first reverse in five starts.

It was the first win of the season half for the Mules who have lost four games. The credit for the win went to Reds McCurry who held the firemen to six bingles. He had his usual bad frame, the fourth, when a single by Russ Carman, passes to G. Ritter, and W. Ritter, filled the bags. The base-runners scored on Sullivan's long double over Bornice's head.

Most of the base-runners for the Mules were put on the sacks by virtue of bunts along the foul lines. However, the two bingles by "Cannel" Breslin were hard hit blows to the outfield. Before he was retired in the sixth, Breslin had socked six straight hits.

RALLY BRINGS WIN FOR BRISTOL NET PLAYERS

TRENTON, N. J., July 30.—Apparently, on the proverbial brink of defeat, Nelson Green and Mrs. Ira Hard of Bristol staged an almost incredible rally yesterday to defeat Bob Boyd and Betty Rhoads in the final round of the invitation mixed doubles tournament at the Trenton Country Club. The scores were 9-6, 8-6, 6-3.

Unable to find their usual games during the opening set and half of the second, Green and Mrs. Hurd seemed on their way to a crushing defeat. Boyd and Miss Rhoads swept the opening set without the loss of a game and had a 3-0 advantage in the second set, before the Green-Hurd duo unleashed its most potent weapons.

At this juncture, Green recovered his steadiness and Mrs. Hurd gained many points at the net. Their return to form forced Boyd and Miss Rhoads to wilt and the ultimate champions finally pulled away to an 8-6 triumph to even the count.

Green and Mrs. Hurd turned back the valiant efforts of their adversaries in the third set and delivered a 6-3 victory and the championship.

Mrs. Hurd was the former Miss Louise Lawrence.

Miss Virginia McIlvaine, Mulberry street, will leave the latter part of the week for Seaside, N. J., where she will pass a fortnight with relatives. Following that Miss McIlvaine will be a guest for the remainder of the summer months of Miss Jean Stoker, Trenton, N. J.
